Vio Me: Self-organisation in Greece

After going on strike & occupying the factory in February 2013 the workers at the Vio.Me Factory have re-opened it under worker's control. For many, this represents a new way forward for unemployed workers in Greece & beyond - running factories without bosses, producing only goods that are needed, and distributing them through solidarity networks. "Every extra profit we make will be given out to people who need it," says Dimitrios Koumasiouras, a worker from Vio.Me.
